Save South Africa stages night vigil outside Constitutional Court

Activists from the Save South Africa campaign will stage a night vigil outside the Constitutional Court tonight in anticipation of the court's ruling on a secret ballot in the Parliamentary Vote of No Confidence Against Jacob Zuma.

A full programme of entertainment and speeches has been developed, and a number of activists will be sleeping over in a specially created camp near the court's Flame of Democracy.

Speakers will include representatives from Save South Africa, campaigners supporting the Palestinian Hunger Strike, Lawyers for Human Rights, Corruption Watch, Johannesburg Against Injustice, Africans Rising and OUTA.

The group will start setting up camp from 17h00 today (Sunday). Proceedings are expected to begin at 18h00, with a number of musicians setting the mood.

On Monday morning, the night vigil team will move into the streets of Braamfontein to form a reception committee for the combined civil society and political party march from Newtown to the Constitutional Court, where the court will hear the application for a secret ballot.

The night vigil and march are part of Save South Africa's campaign of "Minimum Demands for a Socially Just South Africa" – which intensifies the pressure on Jacob Zuma to step down as President, and spells out a set of minimum demands to begin restoring the integrity of the South Africa state.

All media are invited to attend.
