How does Duduzane Zuma sleep at night?

The "open letter" from Jacob Zuma's favorite son is a bizarre attempt to deflect attention away from the increasing evidence against him and his cronies of their central role in state capture and corruption.

A combination of fake news and Bell Pottinger-style innuendos - even down to the Bell Pottinger-style spelling of his own name - Zuma's letter does nothing but confirm how embedded he is in the state capture project, which has siphoned more than R100-billion from the public purse.

Rather than explain his role in this, he resorts to intimidation, incitement and hate speech, in a style that is increasingly becoming the trademark of the Zuma family.

Zuma Junior should not be writing open letters at this time - he should be writing affidavits to explain why he has robbed South Africans of key assets, partnered with a criminal enterprise, and sold our sovereignty.

He should be preparing his submission to the commission of inquiry into state capture, when it eventually happens. That is the "letter" we are all waiting for and which prompts us to ask, in the meantime: Duduzane Zuma, how do YOU sleep at night?
