

MEDIA STATEMENT

17 February 2017

Response from Save South Africa to fake news website

A fake news website named Weekly Xposé has today published a nonsensical article purporting to represent the "plans" of the Save South Africa campaign, quoting an unnamed made-up source.

Save South Africa has repeatedly made the point that it is a campaign to stop state capture, end corruption and restore the integrity of the state -- and has NO intention to form a political party.

We repeat that today, and reject the rubbish masquerading as journalism in the Weekly Xpose article. We do so knowing full well that this fake news website has about as much credibility as its founder and funder, Kenny Kunene, who is a renowned political and financial opportunist.

Note to editors:

Details of the fake news website are contained here:

<http://amabhungane.co.za/article/2017-02-02-kunene>

Queries: Lawson Naidoo / 0731585736